Our Agent at Cumberland Gap.
Lieutenant A. J. Harrington, Company A, Twenty-second Kentucky Volunteers, is agent for the Louisville Democrat.

THE DRAFT BILL.—We publish this morning the draft bill of the State. It is as complete a measure, perhaps, as has ever come from the State Government, and leaves few or none exempt. It will be seen that whenever a legal requisition made volunteers are counted as forming a part of the number from each county, and the draft is made only when the number is not complete. There are yet a few days for the young men to turn out, and not only get their bounty, but save themselves from the disgrace of a draft. There is yet time for Kentucky to fill her quota, and we wish for the honor of the State, that she would do it. Come out, boys, now; it will take little time to fill up the State force.

We have repeatedly urged the necessity of discipline and drill among our men, and have taken occasion to point out that the defeat of Colonel Motte at Newbern arose from placing raw recruits in the field. We have also spoken of our glorious hero-General Nelson, as a severe disciplinarian, and we congratulate the State that he is. We have had enough of Generals who want popularity instead of success. We will publish Tuesday morning, with the greatest pleasure, his correspondence with our excellent Governor, in which he sets forth his resolution to discipline the troops, and the cordial approval of Governor Robinson. We will not say that we want him to act up to it, because Wm. Nelson always does set up to his orders.

J. A. Montfort, who was sent to Camp Morton a few days ago, was a deserter from the Twenty-first regiment Kentucky volunteers, formerly Col. Dudley, now Col. Price. He deserted some months ago, and when captured was in a guerrilla band that infested the neighborhood of Henderson, Kentucky. He is doubly guilty—traitor and deserter. Let the government see that he gets his rights.

It is now asserted that Col. Roden Mason, beyond peradventure, had knowledge of the intended raid upon Clarksville, and it is generally believed that the said Colonel had made a bargain and sale to the enemy which included the surrender of that town. It is moreover asserted that Mason was paying special attention to the sly assess by the name of Wilcox, who, since his recent exploit, has repudiated the Colonel and left him out in the cold.

The Roll of Honor.
We place on record this morning, with great pleasure, the names of that little band of heroes who three times repelled, and finally succeeded in driving away, a rebel force nearly twenty times as numerous as they. Our readers remember the glorious defense of Edgeland Station, against over 400 rebel cavalry, made by Captain Attkisson and twenty-three others of the Fifteenth Indiana. All honor to them; let the list be preserved by all who hold brave and gallant conduct in esteem; let their names be set in letters of gold and hung up in every house, as a memorial of the past and an example for the future. A correspondent at Salem, Indiana, has furnished us with the following letter closing the list:

SALEM, IND., Aug. 26, 1862.

Editor.—Democratic—Captain H. N. Attkisson, of the Fifteenth Indiana, arrived at his home here last night, and returned to his regimen this morning. The following is a list of names, furnished by Captain A., who was in command at Edge-

I also send you a copy of the pass given to Captain Attkisson by Morgan.

Capt. A. was at Gallatin when the following pass was given him. He had only the two men named against several rebel brigades. They killed eight or ten of Morgan's men, and wounded two wagon loads that they saw taken off. You may rest assured that Uncle Sam has no braver than Capt. A.

You may publish as much of this as you think proper. I give it to you as Capt. A. gave it to me.

Respectfully yours, D. M.

GALLATIN, TENN., Aug. 26, 1862.

The scouts, pickets, and soldiers of Morgan's brigade will pass Capt. H. N. Attkisson, U. S. Army, to Bowling Green.

The Madison Courier of the 20th says that John Bueler, an old resident of that city, aged eighty-seven years and eight months, died on the 9th. Evidence of Mr. Jacob Grebe, on Ryker's Ridge. The deceased was one of the oldest inhabitants of Madison, having resided there between forty-six and forty-seven years. He was an old soldier, was in many campaigns against Bonaparte, and was with the victorious at Waterloo. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church in that city, and acted as the sexton of that edifice until he became too aged to perform his duties.

RELEASER.—Lieutenant Colonel Horace Hefren, whose arrest we noticed a few days since, was almost immediately released. The charge against him was that he moved his command without orders. The necessity of the case was Colonel Hefren's justification.

An interranean railway is now in full state of construction, running about a half mile under the city. The road will be handsomely

Mrs. MOTHER, AND LET ME GO.

Have you heard the news that I heard to-day? The news that trembles on every lip? The sky is darker again, they say. The stars are dimmed, the clouds are dark. Our country calls on her sons again, and again. She asks for a hundred thousand men, a thousand thousand men, a million men. And I would be one, mother; let me go.

The love of country was born with me; remembrance how my young heart would thrill to the stories of the War of 1812, and the story of Seminary Hill.

My grandfathers fell in that fight, you know—your own dear brave old blood?

Let me go, mother, let me go.

Under the burning Southern skies; our热血在胸，痛心疾首，泪如雨下。Oh mother, say, shall they turn in vain? Oh mother, say, shall they turn in vain?

Yet bravely fall the bold, the true, the free!

Let me go, mother, let me go.

Now the flag of our blood and pride,

Waving in the wind, is stained with the blood of those who are mocked, insulted, torn down, defied.

And England and France look on and sneer;

A Queen of the earth, though art fallen low!

Let me go, mother, let me go.

Now the flag of our blood and pride,

Waving in the wind, is stained with the blood of those who are mocked, insulted, torn down, defied.

And England and France look on and sneer;

A Queen of the earth, though art fallen low!

Daily Democrat.

To British Subjects in the State of Kentucky.

In consequence of numerous applications having been received at the British Legation at Washington, from British subjects resident in the State of Kentucky, requesting information as to the steps which should be taken by them to establish the fact of their nationality in case of draft for military purposes being made in the State, or of their being called upon to incur obligations inconsistent with their allegiance to Her Majesty the Queen, I have been instructed by Her Majesty's Charge d'Affairs at Washington, to proceed hither with the view of giving such advice as should appear best suited to meet the exigencies of the case.

I have therefore to suggest to all those British subjects in Kentucky in any way forfeited their allegiance to Her Majesty, nor violated her proclamation of neutrality by enlisting in the military or naval service of the United States during the present war, that they should appear, without delay, before the County Court, or any Court of Record, give proof of their nationality, and obtain certificates of their having done so, which certificates, when produced, should, in addition to such certificates, provide himself, wherever possible, with certificates as to his character and position from persons of responsibility and standing resident in the State.

There is no reason to doubt that such papers, if produced before the officer appointed to consider claims of exemption from liability in military service, would be found satisfactory to establish the claim from such liability. It would also be advisable that they should be produced by British subjects requiring permits to enable them to pass beyond the limits of the State, and they would doubtless be sufficient at all times to secure British subjects from being called upon to take any oath or obligation inconsistent with their duty and allegiance to Her Majesty.

In conclusion, I have to point out that British subjects who have declined their intention to become citizens of the United States, but have not completed the act of naturalization, are still entitled to the rights and immunities of British subjects unless they have forfeited their claim to Her Majesty's protection by improperly voting at elections, or in any other way unduly exercising the exclusive privileges of citizens, in which case, having enjoyed the benefits of citizenship, they have rendered themselves liable to all obligations.
